

LOCAL NEWS.

AN INTERESTING REPORT FROM THE NORMAL INSTITUTE.

Business Prospects of Clearwater and the Surrounding Country.

The United States Marshal Takes Charge of Oklahoma Payne and His Followers.

INSTITUTE MATTERS.

In constitution the question of the day before as to what constitutes a legal vote in Kansas, it was decided that a man, that is, a foreigner, must have been a resident of the United States for five years and be naturalized to become a voter in any state, notwithstanding the statement of Kansas as a peculiar provision in her constitution.

The process of law making and the names of the members of the cabinet were given and a general body and skip over the ground that has been traversed in the past four weeks.

Geography was quite interesting in Mr. Hammond's class as to the methods of teaching the subject. Brazil was taken up and recourse, kind of government, habits of the people, face of the country and a good description of the country was given.

In physiology Mr. Andrews occupied two times by a lecture on the ear and its construction, uses of the different parts of the internal and the external ear were fully described by him, showing that he was acquainted with his subject and can give information to any one who is not remarkably well posted.

Four weeks ago we commenced and yesterday ended the course of study and it is quite gratifying to see how much progress has been made in the study.

In philosophy Mr. Halleck gave a number of philosophical experiments that were interesting to the class. A number of the young men and women tried the electric shocks and were satisfied with one trial. This class also reviewed their past work.

Mr. Jay's class in history made a general review from the earliest settlement at St. Augustine down to the present time. The class was divided into groups and each group was assigned a particular period of history to review.

In the class in social organization and management Misses Flower, Daugherty, Cummings, and several other young ladies took part in the discussion, as to where pupils should study, whether it should be at home or at school. Some think it should be at home, Mr. Jay gave it as his opinion that the older pupils should study at home and gave good reasons for it.

The classes in grammar realizing the fact that it was their last chance, had a grand review of everything they had learned. The sentences "If he goes" and "If he goes," making it quite lively for a short time. Grammar is a very exact science, so that there is a fine opportunity to differ if we are so disposed.

I should have mentioned in connection with philosophy that the class had the question of telegraphy and the telephone. The electrical machine was shown by Mr. Barry, and explained by Mr. Alexander. The telephone was explained by diagrams on the board by Miss Gibson. Telegraphy was explained with the use of an instrument by Mr. Barry. Mr. Alexander explained the Daniell battery and Mr. Lawrence explained the Bunsen battery very satisfactorily to the class.

There were a number of other exercises that I have not space to mention. Mr. Arkbuckle, of course, was here as usual. He gave us some valuable information on various topics; he sang a few selections, after which the class sang some songs in a very pleasant manner, and then came the good byes and then the bell was closed.

Mr. Halleck and it was closed. And so has ended the Institute. For four weeks the members have attended and devoted time and money to perfect themselves in the work that was laid out, with what success time only can tell. There is no difference of opinion as to the advantages to be derived from the Institute, but I find that those that oppose and ridicule them are those that do not attend, while all of the best scholars in the county approve of them and show it by attending. Now, who is the more capable of judging, those that attend or those that do not? It is true, but those that do not attend, but not attending, but that does not detract from the utility of the Institute.

There are but a very few that come here especially for fun, although they can enjoy a joke as well as any one, but they come here for a purpose, and that is for the purpose of discussion of the different methods that are presented by the members of the class, and the best plans are adopted, so that although some teachers that ridicule the Institute may get schools and get a good pay, but that proves nothing, more or less than that some school boards believe that there has been no improvement in the methods of teaching since the grandfather's days. If people, members of school boards in particular, would visit the Institute and get acquainted with the workings here and with the teachers, every teacher would find it necessary to attend some Normal Institute or quit the business.

The attendance has not been quite as large this year as last, but last year there was a large number under sixteen years of age, but not so this year. We have had fine weather, and everyone has, to all appearances, enjoyed themselves, and whoever employs the members as teachers will find that they are better qualified than before and the district can be advantage. Our instructors have been earnest and done their work honestly and fearlessly, making friends by their course.

Messrs. Hammond and Halleck are so well known as to need no comments from me. It is enough to say that they are masters of the business and all are satisfied with their efforts.

Mr. Jay came among us a stranger from a strange land (Wellington), and every one looks with suspicion on strangers, but by his gentlemanly bearing and sociability, at last by his ability to conduct and govern his class, he has won our esteem and we shall be sorry to have him leave us, but he will have our best wishes wherever he goes.

Mr. Arkbuckle, whose heart is not in the work, he was not with us at first, although he has been a stranger from some miserable state east of here, yet by his (well, I don't know what to call it, ability to do everything that he undertakes properly, he being a thorough musician, (vocal and instrumental), also a gentleman in every sense of the word, he has made a marked improvement in the class, showing his ability to teach music of the highest order. He has given us some special music, some comic and

LOCAL NEWS.

AN INTERESTING REPORT FROM THE NORMAL INSTITUTE.

Business Prospects of Clearwater and the Surrounding Country.

The United States Marshal Takes Charge of Oklahoma Payne and His Followers.

INSTITUTE MATTERS.

In constitution the question of the day before as to what constitutes a legal vote in Kansas, it was decided that a man, that is, a foreigner, must have been a resident of the United States for five years and be naturalized to become a voter in any state, notwithstanding the statement of Kansas as a peculiar provision in her constitution.

The process of law making and the names of the members of the cabinet were given and a general body and skip over the ground that has been traversed in the past four weeks.

Geography was quite interesting in Mr. Hammond's class as to the methods of teaching the subject. Brazil was taken up and recourse, kind of government, habits of the people, face of the country and a good description of the country was given.

In physiology Mr. Andrews occupied two times by a lecture on the ear and its construction, uses of the different parts of the internal and the external ear were fully described by him, showing that he was acquainted with his subject and can give information to any one who is not remarkably well posted.

Four weeks ago we commenced and yesterday ended the course of study and it is quite gratifying to see how much progress has been made in the study.

In philosophy Mr. Halleck gave a number of philosophical experiments that were interesting to the class. A number of the young men and women tried the electric shocks and were satisfied with one trial. This class also reviewed their past work.

Mr. Jay's class in history made a general review from the earliest settlement at St. Augustine down to the present time. The class was divided into groups and each group was assigned a particular period of history to review.

In the class in social organization and management Misses Flower, Daugherty, Cummings, and several other young ladies took part in the discussion, as to where pupils should study, whether it should be at home or at school. Some think it should be at home, Mr. Jay gave it as his opinion that the older pupils should study at home and gave good reasons for it.

The classes in grammar realizing the fact that it was their last chance, had a grand review of everything they had learned. The sentences "If he goes" and "If he goes," making it quite lively for a short time. Grammar is a very exact science, so that there is a fine opportunity to differ if we are so disposed.

I should have mentioned in connection with philosophy that the class had the question of telegraphy and the telephone. The electrical machine was shown by Mr. Barry, and explained by Mr. Alexander. The telephone was explained by diagrams on the board by Miss Gibson. Telegraphy was explained with the use of an instrument by Mr. Barry. Mr. Alexander explained the Daniell battery and Mr. Lawrence explained the Bunsen battery very satisfactorily to the class.

There were a number of other exercises that I have not space to mention. Mr. Arkbuckle, of course, was here as usual. He gave us some valuable information on various topics; he sang a few selections, after which the class sang some songs in a very pleasant manner, and then came the good byes and then the bell was closed.

Mr. Halleck and it was closed. And so has ended the Institute. For four weeks the members have attended and devoted time and money to perfect themselves in the work that was laid out, with what success time only can tell. There is no difference of opinion as to the advantages to be derived from the Institute, but I find that those that oppose and ridicule them are those that do not attend, while all of the best scholars in the county approve of them and show it by attending. Now, who is the more capable of judging, those that attend or those that do not? It is true, but those that do not attend, but that does not detract from the utility of the Institute.

There are but a very few that come here especially for fun, although they can enjoy a joke as well as any one, but they come here for a purpose, and that is for the purpose of discussion of the different methods that are presented by the members of the class, and the best plans are adopted, so that although some teachers that ridicule the Institute may get schools and get a good pay, but that proves nothing, more or less than that some school boards believe that there has been no improvement in the methods of teaching since the grandfather's days. If people, members of school boards in particular, would visit the Institute and get acquainted with the workings here and with the teachers, every teacher would find it necessary to attend some Normal Institute or quit the business.

The attendance has not been quite as large this year as last, but last year there was a large number under sixteen years of age, but not so this year. We have had fine weather, and everyone has, to all appearances, enjoyed themselves, and whoever employs the members as teachers will find that they are better qualified than before and the district can be advantage. Our instructors have been earnest and done their work honestly and fearlessly, making friends by their course.

Messrs. Hammond and Halleck are so well known as to need no comments from me. It is enough to say that they are masters of the business and all are satisfied with their efforts.

Mr. Jay came among us a stranger from a strange land (Wellington), and every one looks with suspicion on strangers, but by his gentlemanly bearing and sociability, at last by his ability to conduct and govern his class, he has won our esteem and we shall be sorry to have him leave us, but he will have our best wishes wherever he goes.

Mr. Arkbuckle, whose heart is not in the work, he was not with us at first, although he has been a stranger from some miserable state east of here, yet by his (well, I don't know what to call it, ability to do everything that he undertakes properly, he being a thorough musician, (vocal and instrumental), also a gentleman in every sense of the word, he has made a marked improvement in the class, showing his ability to teach music of the highest order. He has given us some special music, some comic and

NATIONAL NOTES.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE EXECUTION OF PRIVATE HENRY.

A Revolt of the Convicts of the Kentucky State Prison at Frankfort.

THREE MORMON MISSIONARIES KILLED IN LEWIS COUNTY, TENNESSEE.

Other Interesting News, Notes and Items Whipped by the Mid-night Wires.

WHY HENRY WAS SHOT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 14.—The following is Lieutenant Greedy's report of the execution of Private Henry:

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 11. To Adjutant-General United States Army:

Through the chief signal officer of the United States army, sir, I have the honor to report that on June 11, 1884, at Camp Clay, near Cape Sabine, Grinnell Land, I became necessary to order the military execution of a convict, named Henry, of the Fifth Cavalry, for continued thieving. The order was given in writing on my own individual responsibility, being called absolutely essential to the safety of the surviving members of the expedition. Ten had already died of starvation and two more had been found dead. The facts inducing action were as follows: Provisions had been stolen in November, 1883, and Henry's conduct therein was more than suspected. March 24, 1884, the party nearly perished from anaphylaxis. When the men were unconscious, Henry stole a tin of condensed milk, and when the men were conscious, he stole a tin of condensed milk, and when the men were conscious, he stole a tin of condensed milk.

The foundation of the Presbyterian church is being built, and soon the society will have a beautiful brick church, which will add much to the appearance of the city.

Our new paper will make its first appearance this week. Blaine and Logan stock is quoted at 120 to 125. Cattle and Hens stock at 80 to 90. Butter & Co. at 12 to 15. St. John & Co. at 10 to 12.

The weather is cool and pleasant and business brisk. ALBANY.

A CONFLICT OF AUTHORITY.

UNITED STATES DEPUTY MARSHAL, W. B. Williams, armed with the proper warrants, issued by United States Commissioner Sherman, and accompanied by one assistant, proceeded last Monday down into the Indian territory for the purpose of taking into his charge the head boaters lately liberated by the U. S. soldiers under command of Gen. Hatcher. Williams overlooks Payne and seven other confederates at a camp south of Arkansas City which was in command of a lieutenant. It was at an early hour before the hour of moving. He announced his mission to the officer in charge and exhibited his authority. The lieutenant wanted twenty minutes to get ready for this, leaving the explanation of which time was given to move. Williams in the name of the civil courts protested, reading immediately the warrant and the order. He announced his mission to the officer in charge and exhibited his authority. The lieutenant wanted twenty minutes to get ready for this, leaving the explanation of which time was given to move.

There were a number of other exercises that I have not space to mention. Mr. Arkbuckle, of course, was here as usual. He gave us some valuable information on various topics; he sang a few selections, after which the class sang some songs in a very pleasant manner, and then came the good byes and then the bell was closed.

Mr. Halleck and it was closed. And so has ended the Institute. For four weeks the members have attended and devoted time and money to perfect themselves in the work that was laid out, with what success time only can tell. There is no difference of opinion as to the advantages to be derived from the Institute, but I find that those that oppose and ridicule them are those that do not attend, while all of the best scholars in the county approve of them and show it by attending. Now, who is the more capable of judging, those that attend or those that do not? It is true, but those that do not attend, but that does not detract from the utility of the Institute.

There are but a very few that come here especially for fun, although they can enjoy a joke as well as any one, but they come here for a purpose, and that is for the purpose of discussion of the different methods that are presented by the members of the class, and the best plans are adopted, so that although some teachers that ridicule the Institute may get schools and get a good pay, but that proves nothing, more or less than that some school boards believe that there has been no improvement in the methods of teaching since the grandfather's days. If people, members of school boards in particular, would visit the Institute and get acquainted with the workings here and with the teachers, every teacher would find it necessary to attend some Normal Institute or quit the business.

The attendance has not been quite as large this year as last, but last year there was a large number under sixteen years of age, but not so this year. We have had fine weather, and everyone has, to all appearances, enjoyed themselves, and whoever employs the members as teachers will find that they are better qualified than before and the district can be advantage. Our instructors have been earnest and done their work honestly and fearlessly, making friends by their course.

Messrs. Hammond and Halleck are so well known as to need no comments from me. It is enough to say that they are masters of the business and all are satisfied with their efforts.

Mr. Jay came among us a stranger from a strange land (Wellington), and every one looks with suspicion on strangers, but by his gentlemanly bearing and sociability, at last by his ability to conduct and govern his class, he has won our esteem and we shall be sorry to have him leave us, but he will have our best wishes wherever he goes.

Mr. Arkbuckle, whose heart is not in the work, he was not with us at first, although he has been a stranger from some miserable state east of here, yet by his (well, I don't know what to call it, ability to do everything that he undertakes properly, he being a thorough musician, (vocal and instrumental), also a gentleman in every sense of the word, he has made a marked improvement in the class, showing his ability to teach music of the highest order. He has given us some special music, some comic and

Mr. Halleck and it was closed. And so has ended the Institute. For four weeks the members have attended and devoted time and money to perfect themselves in the work that was laid out, with what success time only can tell. There is no difference of opinion as to the advantages to be derived from the Institute, but I find that those that oppose and ridicule them are those that do not attend, while all of the best scholars in the county approve of them and show it by attending. Now, who is the more capable of judging, those that attend or those that do not? It is true, but those that do not attend, but that does not detract from the utility of the Institute.

There are but a very few that come here especially for fun, although they can enjoy a joke as well as any one, but they come here for a purpose, and that is for the purpose of discussion of the different methods that are presented by the members of the class, and the best plans are adopted, so that although some teachers that ridicule the Institute may get schools and get a good pay, but that proves nothing, more or less than that some school boards believe that there has been no improvement in the methods of teaching since the grandfather's days. If people, members of school boards in particular, would visit the Institute and get acquainted with the workings here and with the teachers, every teacher would find it necessary to attend some Normal Institute or quit the business.

The attendance has not been quite as large this year as last, but last year there was a large number under sixteen years of age, but not so this year. We have had fine weather, and everyone has, to all appearances, enjoyed themselves, and whoever employs the members as teachers will find that they are better qualified than before and the district can be advantage. Our instructors have been earnest and done their work honestly and fearlessly, making friends by their course.

NATIONAL NOTES.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE EXECUTION OF PRIVATE HENRY.

A Revolt of the Convicts of the Kentucky State Prison at Frankfort.

THREE MORMON MISSIONARIES KILLED IN LEWIS COUNTY, TENNESSEE.

Other Interesting News, Notes and Items Whipped by the Mid-night Wires.

WHY HENRY WAS SHOT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 14.—The following is Lieutenant Greedy's report of the execution of Private Henry:

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 11. To Adjutant-General United States Army:

Through the chief signal officer of the United States army, sir, I have the honor to report that on June 11, 1884, at Camp Clay, near Cape Sabine, Grinnell Land, I became necessary to order the military execution of a convict, named Henry, of the Fifth Cavalry, for continued thieving. The order was given in writing on my own individual responsibility, being called absolutely essential to the safety of the surviving members of the expedition. Ten had already died of starvation and two more had been found dead. The facts inducing action were as follows: Provisions had been stolen in November, 1883, and Henry's conduct therein was more than suspected. March 24, 1884, the party nearly perished from anaphylaxis. When the men were unconscious, Henry stole a tin of condensed milk, and when the men were conscious, he stole a tin of condensed milk, and when the men were conscious, he stole a tin of condensed milk.

The foundation of the Presbyterian church is being built, and soon the society will have a beautiful brick church, which will add much to the appearance of the city.

Our new paper will make its first appearance this week. Blaine and Logan stock is quoted at 120 to 125. Cattle and Hens stock at 80 to 90. Butter & Co. at 12 to 15. St. John & Co. at 10 to 12.

The weather is cool and pleasant and business brisk. ALBANY.

A CONFLICT OF AUTHORITY.

UNITED STATES DEPUTY MARSHAL, W. B. Williams, armed with the proper warrants, issued by United States Commissioner Sherman, and accompanied by one assistant, proceeded last Monday down into the Indian territory for the purpose of taking into his charge the head boaters lately liberated by the U. S. soldiers under command of Gen. Hatcher. Williams overlooks Payne and seven other confederates at a camp south of Arkansas City which was in command of a lieutenant. It was at an early hour before the hour of moving. He announced his mission to the officer in charge and exhibited his authority. The lieutenant wanted twenty minutes to get ready for this, leaving the explanation of which time was given to move. Williams in the name of the civil courts protested, reading immediately the warrant and the order. He announced his mission to the officer in charge and exhibited his authority. The lieutenant wanted twenty minutes to get ready for this, leaving the explanation of which time was given to move.

There were a number of other exercises that I have not space to mention. Mr. Arkbuckle, of course, was here as usual. He gave us some valuable information on various topics; he sang a few selections, after which the class sang some songs in a very pleasant manner, and then came the good byes and then the bell was closed.

Mr. Halleck and it was closed. And so has ended the Institute. For four weeks the members have attended and devoted time and money to perfect themselves in the work that was laid out, with what success time only can tell. There is no difference of opinion as to the advantages to be derived from the Institute, but I find that those that oppose and ridicule them are those that do not attend, while all of the best scholars in the county approve of them and show it by attending. Now, who is the more capable of judging, those that attend or those that do not? It is true, but those that do not attend, but that does not detract from the utility of the Institute.

There are but a very few that come here especially for fun, although they can enjoy a joke as well as any one, but they come here for a purpose, and that is for the purpose of discussion of the different methods that are presented by the members of the class, and the best plans are adopted, so that although some teachers that ridicule the Institute may get schools and get a good pay, but that proves nothing, more or less than that some school boards believe that there has been no improvement in the methods of teaching since the grandfather's days. If people, members of school boards in particular, would visit the Institute and get acquainted with the workings here and with the teachers, every teacher would find it necessary to attend some Normal Institute or quit the business.

The attendance has not been quite as large this year as last, but last year there was a large number under sixteen years of age, but not so this year. We have had fine weather, and everyone has, to all appearances, enjoyed themselves, and whoever employs the members as teachers will find that they are better qualified than before and the district can be advantage. Our instructors have been earnest and done their work honestly and fearlessly, making friends by their course.

Messrs. Hammond and Halleck are so well known as to need no comments from me. It is enough to say that they are masters of the business and all are satisfied with their efforts.

Mr. Jay came among us a stranger from a strange land (Wellington), and every one looks with suspicion on strangers, but by his gentlemanly bearing and sociability, at last by his ability to conduct and govern his class, he has won our esteem and we shall be sorry to have him leave us, but he will have our best wishes wherever he goes.

Mr. Arkbuckle, whose heart is not in the work, he was not with us at first, although he has been a stranger from some miserable state east of here, yet by his (well, I don't know what to call it, ability to do everything that he undertakes properly, he being a thorough musician, (vocal and instrumental), also a gentleman in every sense of the word, he has made a marked improvement in the class, showing his ability to teach music of the highest order. He has given us some special music, some comic and

Mr. Halleck and it was closed. And so has ended the Institute. For four weeks the members have attended and devoted time and money to perfect themselves in the work that was laid out, with what success time only can tell. There is no difference of opinion as to the advantages to be derived from the Institute, but I find that those that oppose and ridicule them are those that do not attend, while all of the best scholars in the county approve of them and show it by attending. Now, who is the more capable of judging, those that attend or those that do not? It is true, but those that do not attend, but that does not detract from the utility of the Institute.

There are but a very few that come here especially for fun, although they can enjoy a joke as well as any one, but they come here for a purpose, and that is for the purpose of discussion of the different methods that are presented by the members of the class, and the best plans are adopted, so that although some teachers that ridicule the Institute may get schools and get a good pay, but that proves nothing, more or less than that some school boards believe that there has been no improvement in the methods of teaching since the grandfather's days. If people, members of school boards in particular, would visit the Institute and get acquainted with the workings here and with the teachers, every teacher would find it necessary to attend some Normal Institute or quit the business.

The attendance has not been quite as large this year as last, but last year there was a large number under sixteen years of age, but not so this year. We have had fine weather, and everyone has, to all appearances, enjoyed themselves, and whoever employs the members as teachers will find that they are better qualified than before and the district can be advantage. Our instructors have been earnest and done their work honestly and fearlessly, making friends by their course.

POLITICAL POINTS.

THE SLANDERERS OF JAMES G. BLAINE SUED FOR LIBEL.

The Indianapolis Journal Asked For $50,000 for Lying About His Wife.

EX-GOVERNOR ST. JOHN TELLS THE PEOPLE OF ROCHESTER ALL ABOUT HIS WHISKY.

Ben. Miller, of Caldwell, Kansas, Nominated for State Senator From the Thirty-fourth District.

BLAINE SUES HIS SLANDERERS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 14.—Harrison, Miller & Elam, attorneys, this afternoon filed a libel suit against the Indianapolis Journal, claiming that the paper had published a series of articles containing a number of untrue statements regarding the late James G. Blaine.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

The Indianapolis Journal, which is a prominent newspaper of that city, is the defendant in the suit. The plaintiff, James G. Blaine, is a well-known politician and statesman. The suit was filed in the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

POLITICAL POINTS.

THE SLANDERERS OF JAMES G. BLAINE SUED FOR LIBEL.

The Indianapolis Journal Asked For $50,000 for Lying About His Wife.

EX-GOVERNOR ST. JOHN TELLS THE PEOPLE OF ROCHESTER ALL ABOUT HIS WHISKY.

Ben. Miller, of Caldwell, Kansas, Nominated for State Senator From the Thirty-fourth District.

<